Annotation Guideline

This guideline describes the types of information that should be annotated for the toxicovigilance studies. It covers the general annotation guidelines explaining the decisions involved in tagging a tweet as non-abuse or abuse.

Annotation Tool

For annotation tasks, this project used the BEAT version 1.2 annotation tool. This Java based tool was designed and is maintained in-house. Improvements were made to the tool during the annotation project to improve performance and increase accuracy of annotations.

Overview of Annotation Process

This is a binary annotation where the tweets will be marked as 'containing a mention indicative of drug abuse' or not marked if no such mention is present. Drug abuse is defined as the use of a medication without a prescription, in a way other than as prescribed, or for the experience or feelings elicited.

Annotation Steps:

1. Identify the drug
2. Identify if the annotation presents abuse information or intent to abuse.
 - 2a. Identify cases of non-personal information(two iterations of this annotation are performed).
3. Resolve annotation disagreements

Specific Annotation Guidelines

Comments may be considered to contain a mention of drug abuse if:

1. The user states they are taking the drug for the feeling it gives them , i.e., 'to get high'
2. The user states they are taking an increased amount of a drug in order to attain a desired effect
3. The user discusses ingesting the drug in an atypical manner, e.g., crushing and snorting
4. The user discusses taking the drug only for the purpose of achieving a specific task, e.g., study all night
5. The user states they obtained the drug from a source other than doctor/pharmacy

Comments in which the user states they wish they had a drug or where they are asking if anyone can give them the drug should not be marked as indicative of drug abuse as they are not a definitive indication of abuse.

Difficult annotation cases

For some comments it is difficult to assess what is abuse and what is the proper use of the medication. For example drugs taken for ADD/ADHD, such as Adderall, are abused by some and taken to increase concentration for task such as studying or writing papers. However, a person prescribed the medication would also have to take the medication to perform these same tasks and may express themselves in a similar manner to someone who is abusing the drug. In these cases, it is the subjective view of the annotator as to whether or not it will be marked as abuse.

Updated (07/15/2015):

Cases where it is not possible to determine whether the user post indicates abuse or not, the tweets are tagged as 'U' meaning unknown. Currently, the 'U' instances are considered to be non-abuse posts for classification purposes. We will address these cases in the future and attempt to resolve these annotations.

Annotation Examples

Nonmedical use/abuse indicating tweets:

about to be cracked on adderall to survive today
 i'm just gonna shower and overdose on seroquel so I'll sleep until morning.
 popped adderall tonight hahahah lets's finish this 100 page paper an oxycodone high from snorting it lasts for one hour, if it is swallowed, your looking at three hour high.

Non-abuse tweets:

seroquel is prescribed. i use valerian root sometimes too. mostly I don't sleep.
 a prescription for adderall should come with my college acceptance paper speaking of oxycodone .. I need to take mine. This pain is ridiculous
